Garrard, Lincoln get ag funds

FRANKFORT - The Kentucky Agricultural Development Board approved $2,583,458 in agricultural diversification projects Friday, including programs in Lincoln and Garrard counties. The projects were announced at the monthly meeting at the Franklin County Cooperative Extension Service office.

The Lincoln County Farm Bureau got $20,000 to administer a program to assist Lincoln County youth in the purchasing of reproductive female stock, cattle, sheep and goats.

Garrard County got $52,500 in the Forage Improvement and Utilization Program to improve pastures to allow for improved grazing by animals, reducing production costs for feed, and improving feed quality.

County model programs are designed to provide farmers with cost-share to allow them to improve and diversify their current production practices.

For more information regarding the sign-up period and guidelines of programs funded in a specific county please contact the county cooperative extension offices.
